Chicago Grain and Produce

CRICAGO, April 22.-A good business was transacted in wheat but it was chiefly of a local character and credited to some of the large floor operators. There was some short wheat so that on the whole there was considerable trading. It was rumored that a persistent buyer of late had been letting go of some of his holdings. The market opened weak and prices declined 3c for May and June and 15c for July, and he lower than July than closing fignres Saturday. There were no new fea vorable. There was some inquiry for cash ent east was being worked on.

Only a moderate business was transacted in corn, fluctuations being limited to 60 We range. The feeling was rather easy early in the day but later on in the session a steadier tone was developed.

A weaker and unsettled feeling developed in oats and prices ranged lower. May being the weakest due to free selling by longs and an absence of any demand of equence except from shorts. Prices on May declined %c from Saturday's close, while June and July only sold off 1/6 1/6 The close was quiet at intermediate prices for May, but at about the same as Saturday for June and July.

Hog products attracted very little attention and trading was light. At the opening the market was easier but fair buying on local and outside account improved prices temporarily. Later, however, the feeling was weaker again with light trading, and prices declined on all leading

A CONJUGAL REUNION.

Aunt Prudence Morgan Finds Her Hus-band After Thirty-One Years. The logicians who argue that marriage is a failure, writes a Charleston World correspondent from Versallies, S. C., can find sturdy refutation here in the shape of Uncle Green Morgan, seventy years of age, who was to-day united in matrimony for the second time to the same woman, Aunt Prudence, whose kinky black hair the snows of sixty-eight winters have failed to whiten or straighten, and this, too, after each of the parties had been married to others and had raised families now grown. The story is quite a romance, going back to antebellum days. In 1858, during slavery, Prudence Morgan, the wife of Green Morgan, of this place, was sold as a slave to a Louisiana planter, separated from her slave husband At taken to a plantation in Louisiana. Years rolled on, the war came and ended, slaves were emancipated and peace came. But Morgan never heard of his wife, and finally gave her up as dead. He married again and raised a family, now grown. Last year the second Mrs. Morgan died. Uncle Green began sprucing up, and it was whispered in the church that the old man was looking for a third wife. One day about a month ago he received a letter with a Texas postmark. It proved to be from his first wife, who was sold thirty years ago as a She was alive and well and wanted to join the old man, who, she had heard, was still alive. She casually mentioned that she had married a man named Brown Texas and raised a family. Brown had died a few months before and the children had gone into the family business themselves. Morgan at once wrote to Prudence to come to him, and she arrived here last week. The meeting of the old people was an affecting one. They started in to live together, but to avoid complications concluded to have an other ceremony performed, and this was done to-day. Resemblance and Difference. A gun is like a bank cashier, Not only 'cause it has its stock,

But that it's apt, in going off,
To generate a little shock;
Herein, tho, is a difference,
To which your reason will assent,
The gun is often charged with shot.
The cushier with on benziement.
